In 'Ma Rainey,' channeling the blues of August Wilson

The original Braodway production of "The Piano Lesson" by August Wilson opened at the Walter Kerr Theater on April 16, 1990, ran for 328 performances and was nominated for the 1990 Tony Award for the Best Play. Charles S. Dutton, Carl Gordon, Tommy Hollis and Lou Myers recreated their stage roles in this filmed production.

Winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Drama and winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best Play, this modern American classic is about family, and the legacy of slavery in America. August Wilson has already given the American theater such spell-binding plays about the black experience in 20th-century America as Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, Joe Turner's Come and Gone, and the Pulitzer Prize-winning Fences. In his second Pulitzer Prize-winner, The Piano Lesson, Wilson has fashioned perhaps his most haunting and dramatic work. At the heart of the play stands the ornately carved upright piano which, as the Charles family's prized, hard-won possession, has been gathering dust in the parlor of Berniece Charles's Pittsburgh home. When Boy Willie, Berniece's exuberant brother, bursts into her life with his dream of buying the same Mississippi land that his family had worked as slaves, he plans to sell their antique piano for the hard cash he needs to stake his future. But Berniece refuses to sell, clinging to the piano as a reminder of the history that is their family legacy. This dilemma is the real "piano lesson," reminding us that blacks are often deprived both of the symbols of their past and of opportunity in the present.

It is 1936, and Boy Willie arrives in Pittsburgh from the South in a battered truck loaded with watermelons to sell. He has an opportunity to buy some land down home, but he has to come up with the money right quick. He wants to sell an old piano that has been in his family for generations, but he shares ownership with his sister and it sits in her living room. She has already rejected several offers because the antique piano is covered with incredible carvings detailing the family's rise from slavery. Boy Willie tries to persuade his stubborn sister that the past is past, but she is more formidable than he anticipated.

Drama / Casting: 6m, 5f / Scenery: Interior Sets Set in a black boardinghouse in Pittsburgh in 1911, this drama by the author of The Piano Lesson, Seven Guitars and Fences is an installment in the author's series chronicling black life in each decade of this century. Each denizen of the boardinghouse has a different relationship to a past of slavery as well as to the urban present. They include the proprietors, an eccentric clairvoyant with a penchant for old country voodoo, a young homeboy u

Seminar paper from the year 2020 in the subject American Studies - Literature, grade: 1,7, University of Duisburg-Essen (Department of Anglophone Studies), language: English, abstract: "The Piano Lesson" tells the story about an African American family during the 1930s that is haunted by the past and shows the bitter fate of the unchangeability of the enslavement of their ancestors. Wilson wrote "The Piano Lesson" as a way of investigation on how African Americans should confront the painful past of slavery and discrimination. This paper shall investigate the different ways of approaching history for descendants of formerly enslaved families. This research addresses multiple issues: How does one deal with the burdens of the past? How can one use the past to make the best for the future and reconstruct cultural identity? In order to answer this question, I am going to interpret the different symbolic devices in the play and put them in context with the historical background. I will take a closer look at how the characters deal with the past, how they try to break away from the old chains of their ancestors and how they live their lives with the burdens of history. I will analyze and interpret the behavior of the characters in more detail. I will further argue that August Wilsons uses his characters and the play itself to show that moving forward and accepting the past is necessary in order to reconstruct cultural identity.
